VOL. VIII.

BUTLER, MISSOURI, WEDNESDAY MARCH 31, 1886

NO. 18

the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe
Expects to Reach St. Louis.

St. Louis Republican.

It is asserted that Mr. A. M. Billings of Chicago has secured full and absolute control of affairs and property of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado railway company, and the road will be built to Kansas City, with a branch to Fort Scott. It is also stated that the financial power and railway influence behind the Billings throne is none other than the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe company, although it has not as yet appeared in any of the transactions, nor has anyone known to be interested in the Atchison company been openly identified with the scheme to get possession of the St. Louis and Colorado property and franchise, but they have got it all the same it what seems to be a well-founded rumor has it right. George S. Bowen, confidential agent of Mr. Billings in this transaction, has, it is said, secured all the stock and bond holdings of President Tiernan, except a few shares of stock which that gentleman chose to retain, in order to legally qualify him to continue in the presidency until the time comes for the real owners to make themselves known. All the other members of the original syndicate have also been scale-d down in their holdings on a par with their president in the matter of ownership.

As it is well known, Mr. Billings advanced the money to complete the last twenty miles of the line for which he was to be well secured and to that end the necessary papers were prepared and duly signed. Soon afterwards the rails and other material began to arrive, but not many miles had been spiked down before Mr. Bowen appeared on the scene and demanded that the provisions of the agreement under which the loan was made should be complied with before anything further was done in the way of using Mr. Billings' material, and stated at the same time that his understanding of the terms of the agreement was that they embraced the immediate surrender to him principal of the entire stock and bond issues of the railway company, save enough stock for the present officials to legally hold their several offices. To this demand a strong protest was made, but it availed nothing, for Mr. Bowen insisted that if the stock and bond were not forthcoming at once he should ship the material back to Chicago and enjoin the proprietor from turning another shovel of dirt on the line or making surveys until the courts could decide between him and them.

So after considerable hesitation the transfer was agreed to and Mr. Bowen returned to Chicago bearing with him about 99 per cent. of the voting power of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado railroad company.

But what Mr. Billings wanted with the project was the one great mystery of the transaction, and so it remained until yesterday when an over-enthusiastic friend of the Atchison company let the secret out. This gentleman said the line between St. Louis and Kansas City would surely be constructed as fast as men, money and mules could push the work, and that within the next twelve or fifteen months the eastern terminus of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe system would be at St. Louis, unless, he added, the quo warranto suit now before the court should end disastrously to the enterprise. That, however, he said, would likely scotch the snake, for the Atchison company was bound to have a line to this city.

The St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado railway company is pushing the work of construction with great rapidity, and as they have secured the right of way through the entire county, they will not be long getting through it. Track is laid to the crossing of the Olive street road and Creve Coeur lake will be reached by the 1st of April.

A Journey to Montgomery.

Men of middle age will vividly recall the memorable journey of Jefferson Davis from his home in Mississippi to Montgomery, Ala., in 1861. It was twenty-five years ago, but it seems like a vision of yesterday. The distinguished Mississippian had been chosen president of the confederate states, and as Montgomery had been made the capital of the new government in honor of the man, Mr. Yancy, who did more than any ten men to "precipitate the cotton states in revolution," Mr. Davis went to the Alabama capital to assume the strange, new position—a position he was to hold through scenes of blood and fire he then little dreamed of, to an end the very opposite of that which he pictured in his speeches on his way. The south was a flame of fire then, and it was natural, perhaps, that the president of the confederate states should interpret the splendor of the passion round him as the promise of a brilliant success in the possible war that might come. There was only one distinguished man in the south—Alex Stephens, of Georgia—who had dismal misgivings of the outcome of that day's work, and his weak voice, reluctantly listened to, was drowned in tumult and clangor of preparation.

It is all over now. A quarter of a century has passed and gone into history. Books and books dealing in that eventful period have been written and they may be found in our libraries. One was written by the first and only president of the confederate states himself, and another by the vice-president. But the strangest and most pathetic fact in a historical aspect is that Mr. Jefferson Davis is about to make another journey from his home in Mississippi to Montgomery over the same route, perhaps, which he traveled in 1861, to perform a different duty from that which he performed twenty-five years ago. He goes to the Alabama capital to deliver an oration at the inauguration of the monument to the confederate dead—a monument to the lost cause—the self-same cause which he inaugurated on the same spot in 1861. He is an old man, now—nearly four score. But he has survived all the other prominent actors in the first part of the drama of 1861 on one side and the other. He belongs to history, along with Lincoln, Seward, Chase, Sumner, Phillips, Greeley, Toombs, Stephens, Yancy and Wigfall; and yet he lives to deliver orations in review of the great struggle with which his and their names are associated.—Mo. Republican.

Battle Creek, Mich., March 24.—"Would you like to see me blow my brains out?" said James Stewart, brother of the city attorney, to a group of men on the street, about 3 o'clock this afternoon. One of the men said he would, whereupon Stewart pulled a pistol and shot himself in the head. The shooting created great excitement on the street. He will die. He was partially intoxicated at the time, and had only just returned from the west, where he had been for twenty years. The group addressed by Stewart were discussing the narrow escape from death of Mrs. Anderson and daughter, whose house was burned this morning, mother and daughter being rescued from their burning beds by the firemen.

Eautolia, I. T., March 23.—The delegates from the five civilized tribes of the Indians in convention here have entered into a compact pledging themselves not to cede, or in any manner alienate to the United States any part of their present territory.

While searching for a would-be murderer the Chicago police accidentally stumbled into an anarchist arsenal in which were large quantities of arms, dynamite bombs, hand grenades and other utensils of nihilistic warfare. Heretofore it has been the custom of Chicagoans and their officials to laugh at the threats made by the anarchists as the idle vapors of beer-inflamed brains, but this discovery puts a little different phase on the matter. It is barely possible that the socialists really intend to make war on property and that unless their plans are nipped in the bud the city by the lake may yet witness some of the horrors which attended the Paris commune.—K. C. Star.

The passage by the house of the bill granting a pension of $2,000 per annum to the widow of Gen. Hancock is peculiarly gratifying to St. Louis, where Mrs. Hancock, as Miss Russell, was widely known and as widely beloved. Her old friends will rejoice (if the bill passes the senate, of which there is little doubt) that she is placed beyond the reach of poverty; and those who know her will rejoice that the noble wife of a pure patriot and brave soldier has been properly cared for by the country he served.—Mo. Republican.

Washington, D. C., March 24.—The secretary of the interior has rendered a decision in the case of Atlantic & Pacific railway company, in which it holds it has no legal claim on the land along the line of the road from San Buenaventura to San Francisco, a distance of 381 miles, and he directs the land office commissioners to restore the same to the public domain. This decision restores to the public domain 2,451,200 acres.

Fort Bellott, Tex., March 25.—Jesse M. Sheets, Fred Chilton, Frank Walley and Ed King were killed and Fenton Woodruff and Charley Emery were so badly wounded that they are not expected to live, during a shooting affray at Tascosa last Saturday. It was all the result of an old difficulty over stealing steers and changing their brands. Louis Bozeman and Catfish Kid, a gambler, are in jail. They were the only ones in the fight who were not shot.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became a Man, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Congress ordered the chaplain's prayer for deliverance from from gambling printed in the Congressional Record. This amounts to an official amen from some of the most experienced poker-players of the continent.—Mo. Republican.
